LIKELIHOOD OF RAILROAD STRIKE IS SCANT IN SPITE OF BALLOT BEING TAKEN SAYS ECONOMIST WHO GIVES FULL CREDIT TO R. R. LABOR BOARD

ADMINISTRATION IS PLANNING TO COPE WITH UNEMPLOYMENT

Conference Early Next Month Will Conduct A National Survey

MAY ASK NEW LAWS

WASHINGTON, Aug 29.—Steps by the administration to prevent a winter of suffering, due to unemployment, were going forward today.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover was completing plans for a national unemployment conference, which will be called by the president within the next few weeks.

The president, it is also understood, has directed other cabinet members to consider the question of unemployment in order that the whole question and methods of remedying it may be worked out in the cabinet next week.

It is the plan of Secretary Hoover to have the unemployment conference in session during the early part of September so representatives of large industry, labor and the government may co-operate in an effort to produce the maximum employment.

A survey of the unemployment situation will be made by the conference and it is expected some measure of re-distribution of labor will be worked out.

The president's future course with regard to idleness will hinge largely on the outcome of the conference. If the forthcoming conference makes recommendations for legislative action, it is expected that the president will go before congress during the latter part of September and ask relief.

STILL AT POLICE STATION ATTRACTS CROWDS OF CURIOUS

All day Sunday the police station was crowded with people viewing the still, confiscated from the home of Thomas Guenther, south Second-st late Saturday night.

This is the first still to be found by local officers, and the murmurs of admiration escaping from the Sunday visitors, testified to the completeness of the plant. Guenther refused to tell where he got the still, other than to say that he bot it second hand, according to police.

To demonstrate the strength of the product of the still, Mayor W. S. Tish, Monday morning poured a small quantity of the liquor into a tin cup and held a lighted match over it. The liquid immediately burst into flame, an action characteristic of pure alcohol.

KEENE WOMAN SAID TO BE INTERESTED PARTY TO BIG DEAL

Residents of the Keene vicinity will be interested to learn of a big real estate deal in Brockton, Mass., in which Mrs. Mae Mowery, Keene, is said to be interested.

A marked copy of the Brockton Daily Enterprise with an account of the deal was received by the Tribune Monday. The item, in part follows:

One of the largest real estate deals in many weeks in this city was recorded Tuesday, when Mrs. Mae Mowery of Keene, O., acquired of Joseph A. Stone the three large apartment houses at the corner of Newbury and Belmont streets. The deal is reported to involve more than $50,000. Mrs. Mowery is the mother of Ward B. Mowery, former president of the Merchants' Credit Co., of this city.

JUDGE BRANDEIS' DAUGHTER NAMED ON WAGE BOARD

Miss Elizabeth Brandeis.

Miss Elizabeth Brandeis, daughter of Justice Brandeis of the United States supreme court, has just been appointed secretary of the District of Columbia minimum wage board. She succeeds Mrs. Clara Mortenson Beyer, who resigned. Miss Brandeis has been Mrs. Beyer's assistant. The position carries a salary of $2,500.

ROSCOE MAN'S CELLAR IS RAIDED SATURDAY NIGHT; WINE IS GONE

Two kegs of home made wine, and a number of cans of peaches and peas were stolen from the cellar of the home of William Smart, Roscoe, at an early hour Sunday morning.

The lock to the cellar door was broken by the miscreants, an iron coupling pin from a wagon being used for that purpose. The piece of iron was left lying by the cellar door.

Mr. Smart says the theft occurred later than 12 o'clock Saturday night, as he did not go to bed until that time.

Sheriff Ernest Darr was notified Monday morning. Mr. Smart made an offer of $10 for information leading to the arrest of the guilty party.

COUNTRY CLUB NOT YET DECIDED UPON PURCHASE OF SITE

No definite plan for financing the purchase of the Country Club site, Cambridge-st. had been worked out Monday by the committee named recently by the club to consider the matter.

The appointment of the committee followed the rejection of the proposition to purchase the Olinger farm, near Canal Lewisville, and to build a new country club on that site, touching upon the Upper Basin.

The work of the committee, composed of W. A. Himebaugh, Sr., George Mitchell and R. H. Mills, is to consider ways and means to purchase the site upon which the club now has its home.

The option of the Cambridge property, owned by Attorney C. B. Hunt it was announced Monday, has been extended. The plans of the committee, when worked out, will be reported to the club's board of governors and later will be made known to the club membership.

FRESNO SCHOOLS TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 12

Pupils of the Fresno school are to report at the school house on Saturday morning September 3, at 9 o'clock, to receive their assignment to classes, and to get a list of the books that will be required for the coming year.

The school will open on Monday morning, September 12. B. J. Fischer is principal of the school, Mrs. Fischer is the primary teacher, and one teacher is yet to be hired.

Labor Policy Of Railroads Has Been Dominated By Money Grabbers Who are Not Interested In Giving The Public Service, Says W. Jett Lauck

WASHINGTON, Aug 29.—Despite the fact that a strike vote is now being taken by the railroad brotherhoods because of wage reductions ordered by the railroad labor board, W. Jett Lauck, who has been consulting economist of the railroad unions, today paid high tribute to the work of the board and gave it credit for stabilizing railroad labor conditions.

The recent decision of the board relative to punitive overtime, Lauck said, has been displeasing to both the railroad employe and the railroad managements. He expressed confidence, however, that the decisions of the board had fore-stalled labor troubles on the railroads, despite the fact that the brotherhoods are now taking a strike ballot.

"The unfortunate and deplorable situation from the point of view of the public," Lauck declared, "has been that the labor policy of the railroads have been dominated by a group of financiers and railway executives whose main object has been not to serve the public intelligently by bringing about real railway efficiency and economies, but to secure savings in operating costs by destroying just and reasonable standards of work and competition.

"The depressed condition of the transportation industry with the resultant lack of employment has been favorable to their plans, as it has weakened the economic power of the employes. The labor board however, has weakened the indefensible efforts of this group by maintaining the

HOLD SUSPECT IN MILLION DOLLAR TOLEDO P.O. HAUL

NEW YORK, Aug 29.—Charged with the theft of $5,000 in bonds from a local brokerage firm, Charles Fox, who according to Assistant District Attorney Dooling, is wanted in connection with the daring $1,000,000 postoffice robbery at Toledo, Ohio, last February, was held under $10,000 bail. Upon failure to furnish bonds Fox was sent to the Tombs prison.

Fox, it is said, was arrested on a tip given the police by William Treffry, known as "Canada Bill" now in prison awaiting trial in connection with a jewelry holdup. About a month ago, according to the police Treffry made a confession saying he was the leader of the gang responsible for the Toledo robbery.

WIFE REFUSED TO COOK, IS DIVORCE ACTION CHARGE

Roy Maynard Miley Monday filed a suit for divorce in probate court against Bessie Mae Miller. The couple were married September 25, 1920, and have one child.

The plaintiff claims that the defendant refused to prepare his meals and to do other ordinary household duties. He states that he was obliged to board at a restaurant.

On August 21, 1921, the defendant abandoned the plaintiff for the fourth time and refused to return to his home according to the petition.

R. B. McDermott is representing the plaintiff.

INJURIES OF NOVIS MAY PROVE FATAL

Little hopes were entertained late Monday afternoon for the recovery of William Novis Isleta, who was confined to the City hospital Monday, suffering from internal injuries he received Friday afternoon when a 15-foot embankment gave way on Henry Young's farm near Orange, burying him.

The avalanche covered all but the top of his head.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Herbert Hoover has been considerably embarrassed in his plans for Russian relief by the wide publicity given to an article in "The World's Work" for June, in which Capt. T. T. C. Gregory, Mr Hoover's chief lieutenant in Central Europe in 1919, boasts that he used the machinery of the American relief administration to overthrow the Hungarian Soviet republic. The London Daily Herald recently printed a summary of Captain Gregory's article and pointed out its obvious bearing upon Mr. Hoover's Russian activities.

"Is history to repeat itself?" asks the Daily Herald, according to a dispatch to the New York Times. "Is Mr Hoover to be allowed to fly at still higher game during his new food mission to Russia?"

"The despicable story of bounce and brag told by Captain Gregory of Mr Hoover's American relief agency 'needs very little comment from decent people,' says the English labor organ.

In the article to which the Herald refers entitled "Overthrowing a Red Regime," Captain Gregory claims that he conspired with "Moderate" labor leaders of Hungary to overthrow the soviet government. As an incident to his manipulation of the machinery of the American relief administration for counter-revolutionary purposes Captain Gregory relates how he accepted one million dollars in cash from the Hungarian Soviet government for food supplies which he never intended to deliver to them.

FUNDAMENTALLY IT'S DISHONEST TO CAPITALIZE RAILWAY DEBTS

Committee Of 48 Leader Points Out The Unusual Business Methods

TAXPAYER THE LOSER

Whole System Of Our Ry. Financing Is Declared Preposterous

NEW YORK, Aug. 29. The committee of 48 thru its executive chairman Mr. J. A. H. Hopkins, has issued the following reply to the questions that have appeared in the public press in reference to its article published on August 1st opposing the Harding Railroad Plan. The questions which have been raised and the Committee of 48's answer are as follows:

1. Why is it not proper to capitalize the indebtedness of the Railroads?

The reason that this is not only improper but fundamentally dishonest is because monies spent to replace worn out equipment or other depreciation in no wise add to the value of the property, but are a necessary expense of upkeep, and should be reckoned not as an expenditure of additional invested capital but as a part of the overhead expense to be paid out of current earnings, which is inseparable from any commercial proposition.

Proper financing requires the setting aside of a sinking fund taken from current earnings in connection with every bond issue so that the bonds themselves will be ultimately retired and the indebtedness wiped out. This is a common practice in every business enterprise except the railroads, which have never made any such provision. Instead of paying their bonds at maturity they have simply issued new bonds, with the result that at the present time railroad securities [illegible] a book value of approximately $[illegible],000,000, the interest charges of which represent an intolerable tax upon the public in the shape of increased freight and passenger rates notwithstanding the fact that all of their securities could be purchased in the open market for about $11,[illegible],000,000. The difference is WATER.

If the Harding Plan is adopted and the railroads again capitalize their indebtedness they simply add a further fiction $500,000,000 to the present capitalization. In addition to this they add the interest on these bonds (which at 6 per cent equals $30,000,000) to the [illegible] overhead expense

CABINET CRISIS IS AT HAND

Bitterness Continues To Grow Since Murder Of Dr. Erzberger

GERMANY IS BOILING

Cabinet Is Called Into Extraordinary Session Monday

By Frank E. Mason

BERLIN, Aug 29.—The flames of political strife unloosed by the murder of Dr Mathias Erzberger, leaped high today when the full news of yesterday's demonstration here and in other towns was told and when Chancellor Wirth summoned his cabinet to an extraordinary session to discuss the internal crisis.

Two workingmen were killed and a third was mortally wounded in a clash between "Reds" and Monarchists yesterday afternoon at Potsdam.

That old Kaisertown bristled with uniforms of men and officers of the old army, including some generals, who had defied the government's order forbidding a demonstration in celebration of the battle of Tannenberg. At the same time, Potsdam swarmed with radicals who had heeded the summons of the Rotefahne, to make a counter-demonstration.

Police fired into a throng of workingmen when the latter resisted an attempt to throw their red flags into the canal.

The inter-party strife and bitterness continues to grow hourly in intensity and the menace of a cabinet crisis loomed still large today.

Moderate elements of all parties were bending their energies to prevent it, realizing that nothing could be more disastrous to Germany at this moment, when the war-crippled industries are just beginning to regain their bearing and when the league of nations council is about to make a final decision on Upper Silesia.

Meanwhile the investigation into Erzberger's assassination continues.

The newspaper war over the sensational political murder raged on with fury. Gloomy predictions were made on all sides. Vorwaerts, the government's mouthpiece, said:

"Only brutal ruthlessness now can save Germany from a bloody civil war."

The Catholic organ, Germania, again demanded the suppression of all Nationalistic holidays, which the Militarists are using for purposes of [illegible] the paper charges. The roy[illegible] counters this with "The Nationalistic youths know how [illegible] with a strong will."

The Million-Tongued Salesman

It may be possible without advertising and in absolute silence as regards their merit, to sell a choice stock of goods. But no one will dispute the assertion that commodities of every description move much more rapidly when there is behind them the impetus of printer's ink.

The story is told of a farmer who once sent his 11-year old boy to town with a sack full of his finest roasting ears. The boy went, as he was told, to the main residence streets, and walked up and down all day. At night weary and footsore he returned home with his corn unsold. His mother asked him why he had not sold the contents of his sack and his reply was that no one had asked him what the sack contained.

In every town in the country there is at least one merchant, in some several, who, like the little boy have marketable wares to sell, but they fail to tell the public what they have. There is no mystery concerning the inevitable drift of patronage past the doors of these merchants into those of their competitors who have had the forethot to advise the world that they have something to sell, what it is and what it is worth.

Above the assertion is made that "commodities of every description move much more rapidly when there is behind them the impetus of printer's ink." One might think that a newspaper or a magazine could not be sold by advertising, but would have to await the inspection of prospective readers before subscriptions could be sold. But there need be no exception made of even literary commodities. Two generations ago, when the elder James Gordon Bennett began to cherish ambitions about making his new publication, The New York Herald, the leading paper of the metropolis, he turned to advertising.

For one newspaper to use the columns of other papers to advertise itself was an unheard of piece of audacity in those days. But Bennett conceived the idea and was determined to try it out. Some papers took his copy, others turned it down. But he advertised where he could in the columns of his competitors and in other eastern cities and the campaign produced unexpected returns. He always gave the credit for the quick rise of The Herald to the advertising campaign in its behalf.

More recently The Literary Digest adopted the same scheme to increase its circulation. Here was an old and well established publication, a money maker and a periodical of wide influence which was not satisfied with what it had. Did it go into other magazines to proclaim its merits to the reading public? Not so. It chose the quicker and more intensive media, the American newspapers.

This was in 1916, five years ago. Its directors decided it was possible to increase its circulation, some fixing the limit at a fifty percent gain, while the more optimistic declared it was possible to increase it 100 percent. At that time the circulation of The Digest was 350,000. For four years a million dollars a year was spent in 400 representative newspapers. It was not only one of the most significant drives for circulation, but incidentally one of the most wisely planned advertising campaigns ever launched.

Today The Literary Digest has practically ONE MILLION more readers than it had the day the first advertisement was run. More than 1,300,000 paid subscribers are now listed on its circulation cards and the income of the magazine has been increased more than 300 percent. The most sanguine hopes of its directors have been surpassed many fold and those who were in doubt at the outset as to the wisdom of spending a million dollars a year to boost circulation thru a newspaper advertising campaign are the most enthusiastic endorsers of the plan today.

It is true the copy prepared for The Digest was scientifically prepared by some of the best ad copy writers in the world, but back of all this was the shrewd determination of those directors who put the plan over to avoid the fatal mistake of any fly-by-night advertising campaign. Three years was the minimum period advocated by many, while some of the ablest men in the company advocated the expenditure of $4,000,000 over a period of six years. And above all things else it was this steady hammering at the intelligence of the American people, this persistent appeal to their understanding, this ceaseless onslaught on their desire for high class literature in the home that was the big factor in adding more than a million subscribers.

To be sure, not every reader of the 400 newspapers that carried The Digest copy is today a subscriber for that publication. Nature does not expect every seed that falls upon fallow to take root. But the result proves in countless thousands of persistent, intelligent advertising campaigns that the advertiser is absolutely sure to reap profitable results. And so sure will this be in every case that there is no more [illegible] maxim in America today than the old slogan—"IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE."

In the modern business world advertising is the MULTIPLE MERCHANT. It is the MILLION-TONGUED SALESMAN. To the business man who desires to make each year surpass the preceding one, it is the real [illegible] thruout the ages. With the discovery of ADVERTISING, the world-old quest of the alchemists was [illegible] within the power of advertising to turn base products into pure gold.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Adjournment of Congress for [illegible] has set a period to the [illegible] prospects of legislation [illegible] the railroad [illegible] ability to bring the [illegible] to a definite stage of development [illegible] the outstanding points of [illegible] among the business community. [illegible] nothing will be lost [illegible] While more or less [illegible] the fact that Germany has now [illegible] signed a treaty of peace [illegible] another uncertain factor [illegible] the situation and ought to have a favorable effect on sentiment.

Improvement of Railroad Earnings.

That the railroads have at last definitely started upon a movement toward better things has been evident for some weeks past. Earnings reports made public during the past few days again confirm the views previously entertained on that subject, and the same opinion is indicated by reports of traffic movement. Despite, therefore, [illegible] which have been suffered by the railroad issues in consequence of the unexpected postponement of the refunding bill, the real basis of confidence in the future of the securities remains unchanged, or, if anything, has been strengthened. A cloud on the horizon is seen in the apparently hostile disposition of the American Federation of Labor in respect to the readjustment of labor costs, particularly as affects the railroads. This is a situation which must evidently be worked out during the coming months.

Trade Readjustment.

Price indexes indicate quite clearly that so far as money values of commodities are concerned, the general readjustment movement is about over. What remains to be done is an equalization of prices among themselves, some of them being evidently out of line with the general average. This, however, is not likely to be long deferred. Meantime, further industrial dividends suspensions show that there are still postponed results of the depression which have not yet fully exhibited their influence and are still to be developed, while in the same group of factors are to be mentioned the poor statements made public during the past week by the copper companies. Most of these long ago suspended dividends, but their overhead charges and fixed expenses continue, and the operating results of the past quarter show that they have been running still further behind with thus far no definite prospects of improvement. In the steel trade, slightly better prospects may prevent the industry from reaching the same depth of depression as the non-ferrous metals. It still remains true that the most hopeful symptoms in the present situation are found in the manufacture of textiles, shoes and other more lately [illegible] commodities. In these a satisfactory autumn trade is now confidently predicted.

Helping the Farmer.

Passage [illegible] of the Agricultural [illegible] finally brings [illegible] for furthering the exportation of farm products [illegible] financial assistance. Under [illegible] the War Finance Corporation may make loans either to [illegible] on the strength of collateral consisting of [illegible] or products [illegible] however, must [illegible] United States. This [illegible] powers of the War Finance Corporation and since [illegible] with [illegible] a hand [illegible] of work. [illegible] that this and allied measures may not fully assist the movement of [illegible] to foreign countries [illegible] influential in holding [illegible] quotations which might otherwise have gone to lower levels. How far the farmer himself will be actually aided by the new bill [illegible] questioned, but if operations under it should be active, it may easily serve to strengthen the course of foreign exchange. On the other hand, continued speculation in marks and other currencies has tended to render exchange quotations very unreliable and feverish. The impression grows stronger in many quarters that Germany at least must soon take some decisive measures with a view to the settling of the status of her currency, this to involve, perhaps, a revaluation of the mark.

Credit Strain Relieved.

Events have shown that the severity of the credit strain in many parts of the country is less than had been expected. Not only has the smallness of the cotton crop and the relatively smaller value of some other crops tended in this direction, but there has been an unusually early movement of products to market for cash. In consequence, the demands of borrowers upon banks in the agricultural regions are less intense than had been expected, a fact which is reflected in the diminishing volume of bills held by Federal Reserve Banks, which is now only $1,530,556,000, a decline of nearly 50 per cent from the level of a year ago. Bankers report funds returning from the interior already and there is indication that they are being more freely supplied to borrowers on collateral.

Market Review and Outlook.

Psychologically speaking, much of the news of the week, although indicating no fresh developments of broad general significance, has been rather discouraging, but, as demonstrated on many occasions, when any fair amount of buying orders put in an appearance it is found that there is a paucity of offerings. While so much uncertainty exists in certain industrial directions, buying by the general public cannot be expected to assume large proportions and, no doubt, as accounts become weakened some further scattered liquidation may be counted upon. Nevertheless, it can be assumed that the great run of stocks has now reached levels which are making them attractive to those on the inside who are in a position to know what the real book values are. A potent factor in connection with the market is always the money situation, and, while there may be occasional flurries in rates, everything now points to plentiful supplies for a long time ahead, as the Federal Reserve banks are in an exceedingly strong position.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

Editor Tribune and Times-Age.

It ought to be a matter of very general concern, to Ex Service men, to know that any person entitled, under the provision of the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, as amended, to take vocational training must make application therefore within eighteen months from the date of the approval of this act of Congress. This would terminate the time December 16, 1922.

Only men who have established a claim of disability, are entitled to this vocational training and their disability must first be established.

Ex Service men, in Coshocton-co, who are suffering from any degree of disability, as a result of their term of service, should file their claim for compensation promptly so that their cases may be passed upon and their claim for vocational training established.

A "clean-up campaign" has been inaugurated, by the government, to get all of these cases before the proper governmental department that justice may be rendered the disabled and partially disabled Ex-Service men.

The Red Cross is the designated organization thru which these claims may be filed, and the Coshocton-co Red Cross chapter urges all those, who are suffering any degree of disability, to present their claim.

Call at the Red Cross office, in the Frew Building, any day of the week, except Sunday, from 8:30 to 12 o'clock in the forenoon and from 2 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon and this service will be gladly extended.

Men who are receiving compensation for disability and are not getting vocational education should also call at the Red Cross office and have their claim for vocational training presented to the proper department.

When calling at the Red Cross offices be sure to have your discharge papers with you.

EASTERN OHIO HAS 90 PER CENT CORN CROP, INDICATIONS

The corn crop in the eastern and east central counties of the State will be better than 90 per cent of a normal crop according to present indications. The crop in some sections is late and hence subject to early frost according to reports received from correspondents by C. J. West, agricultural statistician. In the western and southwestern countries considerable improvement is noticeable over the condition of a few weeks ago but the condition ranges from 65 to 85 per cent as compared with a condition considerably higher in the Eastern half of the State.

Late potatoes are in a healthy and vigorous condition and were it not for the poor stand in many fields an average crop would follow from present indications. Like the corn, late potatoes will be subject to damage from early frosts this year.

FUNDAMENTALLY

and necessitate additional taxation in the shape of increased rates or otherwise in order to meet this increased indebtedness.

2. (a) Why cannot the Railroads issue their own bond for $500,000,000 instead of issuing them thru the War Finance Corporation as in either case the money is collected from the investing public?

(b) Why does the Committee of 48 contend the Harding Plan involves taking $500,000,000 more out of the taxpayers' pockets?

The railroads are not putting out the bonds themselves because, being practically bankrupt, they are unable to float them; hence they require the War Finance Corporation to go sponsor for the bonds and give them what is in effect a Government guarantee. By reason of this guarantee it is hoped that the public will invest, because they will be satisfied as to the security.

This increased liability for $500,000,000 must eventually be satisfied. Either the railroads must pay it by increasing their rates (which in law and in fact are taxes), or failing to do so the Government must make good and add this amount to its tax budget. In either case the taxpayer pays the bill. Meanwhile he pays the $30,000,000 interest annually.

3. Does not the fact that this money is to be used to stimulate the steel and equipment companies by giving them additional contracts for replacements and repairs indicate that the real object of the administration is simply to provide work for the unemployed?

The Committee of 48 does not desire to express any opinion as to the exact purpose of the administration in proposing this legislation, but the facts are that immediately after the return of the railroads to their private owners some 30,000 employes were discharged from the railroad shops and the work transferred to private steel and equipment companies.

The cost of doing this work in the private yards was considerably higher than in the railroad shops. This has been frankly admitted by Mr Rea of te Pennsylvania. The additional expense involved has been estimated at $700,000,000 per annum. This is understandable when it is remembered that repairs to specific locomotives which have been checked up are shewn to have cost as much as $20,000 in the private yards as compared to a cost of $5,000 for the same work in the railroad shops. The difference goes into the profit—or profiteering—account of the equipment companies.

This is only one illustration of the system by which Wall Street thru its control of railroad financing has consistently impoverished the railroads themselves while steadily draining the pockets of the investing public and diverting the proceeds into the coffers of the industrial enterprises (which live upon Railroad patronage) in which the Wall Street group is especially interested and from which it draws its profits.

The so called Harding Plan emanated from this same Banking Group which outlined the proposition to Secretary Mellon and obtained his approval thereto before the President issued his message urging its adoption. So that the Committee of 48 is forced to the conclusion that in so doing the Banking Group certainly had in mind the desirability of protecting the interests of the steel and equipment companies. There is no evidence to show that they were actuated by the more philanthropic motive of indirectly providing work for the unemployed. On the contrary, the policy of the Banking and Railroad groups has been to "liquidate Labor."

In conclusion I would point out that our whole system of railroad financing is preposterous. The railroads began by capitalizing their earning capacity. They are now capitalizing their debts. They have failed to reserve out of their current earnings the necessary percentage for depreciation and have made no provision for the retiring of their bonded indebtedness. As a result they have now reached the point where they are demanding that the Government liquidate their debts, assume their bonded indebtedness, and guarantee their obligations.

It is only a question of time when this inverted pyramid wil topple over. Either it will topple to the right thru the failure of the railroads, crush the investing public and wreck our transportation system, or it will fall to the left upon the Government itself, which if it continues to guarantee the obligations of the private owners, will take upon itself a burden that will crush the taxpayer.

President's Harding's proposition has just been favorably reported to the Senate by the Ways and Means Committee and undoubtedly will be forced thru unless the Senate minority who are courageously demanding its defeat are backed up by an aroused public sentiment.

SYNOPSIS.

PROLOGUE—In December, 1918, four men gathered in a hotel in Berne and heard one of the quartet outline a plan to paralyze Great Britain and at the same time seize world power. The other three, Hocking, American, and Steinemann and Von Gratz, Germans, all millionaires, agree to the scheme, providing another man, Hiram Potts, an American, is taken in. The instigator of the plot gives his name as Comte de Guy, but when he leaves for England with his daughter he decides to use the name Carl Peterson.

CHAPTER I.—Capt. Hugh (Bulldog) Drummond, a retired officer, advertises for work that will give him excitement, signing "X10." As a result he meets Phyllis Benton, a young woman who answered his ad. She tells him of strange murders and robberies of which she suspects a band headed by Carl Peterson and Henry Lakington of being the leaders.

CHAPTER II.—Drummond decides to go to The Larches, Miss Benton's home. An attempt is made on the road to wreck his machine when another, occupied by Peterson, Lakington and a strange man, blocks the road. While dining with Phyllis Benton and her father Drummond hears a terrible shriek at The Elms. During the night Drummond leaves The Larches and explores The Elms. He discovers Lakington and Peterson using a thumbscrew on an American who signs a paper. Drummond rescues the American after a struggle and takes him to his home. The man is Hiram C. Potts.

CHAPTER III.—Peterson visits Drummond the next day, departing with a threat to return later and recover Potts and also a torn paper which Drummond seized the night of the fight. With the aid of Peter Darrel, an old army friend, Drummond arranges to hide Potts, and substitute in his place one Mullings, a demobilized soldier, who is seized by Peterson and his gang and taken to The Elms, along with Drummond.

CHAPTER IV.—When Peterson discovers the hoax Drummond is escorted by Irma to a room where he is to stay for the night. During the night Drummond is exploring the house when he gets in a strange room in which is a cobra. He escapes but on the stairs has a fight in [illegible]

CHAPTER V.—Drummond enlists the aid of Algy Longworth, Toby Sinclair, Ted Jerningham and Jerry Seymour, the latter an aviator. Drummond, after an encounter with the pseudo Potts, meets Irma talking to the marquis of Laidley and suspects the gang is plotting for the Laidley jewels. Drummond and his friends are gassed as they sit in his apartment. Lakington carries off Potts.

CHAPTER VI.—When Drummond and his friends recover they plan to again rescue Potts. Drummond goes to see Phyllis and besides learning Potts has been taken to The Elms also becomes engaged to her. Drummond is captured by the gang in the attempted rescue.

CHAPTER VII.—Drummond is held prisoner in The Elms and he hears Peterson making plans to attend a conference at the Ritz. He also hears Peterson and Lakington plotting to make Potts sign an agreement. Drummond on the roof watches as the two plotters begin to torture Potts with a thumbscrew. He yells through the skylight and causes Lakington and Peterson to rush from the room.

CHAPTER VIII.—Potts follows Drummond's advice and escapes to The Larches, where a waiting machine takes him away. Drummond is rescued when a crowd gathers because of the commotion he makes on the roof. He tells Phyllis he must attend the Ritz conference. Drummond has learned that the gang is after the jewels of the duchess of Laidley. He meets Jerome Green, an American detective, in Paris. Green has come to find Potts for his relatives.

CHAPTER IX.—An attempt is made to kill Drummond with poisoned darts shot through a blow pipe by a queer little man who is hidden in Drummond's bedroom. Among others attracted by the commotion is Detective Green. Upon their return to Drummond's quarters in London he receives a letter purporting to come from Phyllis. With Green he goes to The Larches and finds that the place has been entered. There is evidence that Phyllis and some of his friends have been carried off. He runs toward The Elms, and Green takes his car, going toward London for help. Drummond is captured and left bound while Lakington and Irma leave for Laidley Towers on their mission of stealing the duchess' jewels.

CHAPTER X.—Drummond tricks the German Bolshevist guarding him, then releases his companions, also Potts and Phyllis. He announces his intention of going to Laidley Towers.

CHAPTER XI.—In the grounds of Laidley Towers Drummond kills Lakington's chauffeur and [illegible] after the latter has stolen the jewels of the duchess of Laidley. Drummond and Lakington battle and Lakington is forced into a bath of chemicals from which he springs only to be killed by one of his own death traps.

"We're so glad you could come, Mr. Ram Dar," remarked the duchess affably. "Everyone is so looking forward to your wonderful entertainment." Round her neck were the famous pearls and as the Indian bowed low over her outstretched hand, his eyes gleamed for a second.

It had been the marquis of Laidley himself who had suggested getting hold of this most celebrated performer, who had apparently never been in England before. And since the marquis of Laidley's coming-of-age was the cause of the whole evening's entertainment, his suggestion had been hailed with acclamation. How he had heard about the Indian, and from whom, were points about which he was very vague; but since he was a very vague young man, the fact elicited no comment. The main thing was that here, in the flesh, was a dark, mysterious performer of the occult, and what more could a house party require? And in the general excitement Hugh Drummond crept closer to the open window. Suddenly his jaw tightened; Irma Peterson had entered the room with young Laidley.

"Do you want anything done, Mr. Ram Dar?" asked the duchess—"the lights down or the window shut?"

"No, I thank you," returned the Indian. "I am ready. Who first will learn of the things that are written on the scroll of Fate?"

And it was at that moment that the intent watcher outside the window began to shake with silent mirth. For the face was the face of the Indian, Ram Dar, but the voice was the voice of Lakington. It struck him that the next ten minutes or so might be well worth while. The problem of removing the pearls from the duchess' neck before such an assembly seemed to present a certain amount of difficulty even to such an expert as Henry. And Hugh crept a little nearer the window, so as to miss nothing.

Evidently the scene was now set—the necessary props were in position—and Hugh waited with growing impatience for the principal event. But the principal performer seemed in no hurry. In fact in his dry way Lakington was thoroughly enjoying himself. An intimate inside knowledge of the skeletons that rattled their bones in the cupboards of most of those present enabled the gods to speak with disconcerting accuracy; and as each victim insisted on somebody else trying the sands that came from beyond the mountains, the performance seemed likely to last indefinitely.

At last a sudden delighted burst of applause came from the group, announcing the discomfiture of yet another guest, and with it Lakington seemed to tire of the amusement. Engrossed though he was in the anticipation of the main item which was still to be staged, Drummond could not but admire the extraordinary accuracy of the character study. Not a detail had been overlooked; not a single flaw in Lakington's acting could be noticed. It was an Indian who stood there, and when a few days later Hugh returned her pearls to the duchess, for a long time neither she nor her husband would believe that Ram Dar had been an Englishman disguised. . . . And this was what happened as seen by the fascinated onlooker crouching near the window outside.

Superbly disdainful, the Indian after a short, meaningless patter, to hold the attention of the audience, walked to the open window. With arms outstretched he stared into the darkness, seeming to gather strength from the gods whom he served.

"Do your ears not hear the whisperings of the night?" he demanded. "Life rustling in the leaves; death moaning through the grasses." And suddenly he threw back his head and laughed, a fierce, mocking laugh; then he swung round and faced the room. For a while he stood motionless, and Hugh, from the shelter of the bushes, wondered whether the two quick flashes that had come from his robe as he spoke—flashes such as a small electric torch will give, and which were unseen by anyone else—were a signal to the defunct chauffeur.

Then a peculiar look came over the Indian's face, as his eyes fell on a Chinese cabinet.

"Where did the Protector of the Poor obtain the sacred cabinet of the Chow Kings?" He peered at it reverently, and the duke coughed.

"One of my ancestors picked it up somewhere," he answered apologetically.

"Fashioned with the blood of men, guarded with their lives, and one of your ancestors picked it up!" The duke withered completely under the biting scorn of the words, and seemed about to say something, but the Indian had turned away, and his long, delicate hands were hovering over the box.

With gleaming eyes he stared in front of him, and a woman shuddered audibly.

"What is it supposed to do?" she ventured timidly.

"For centuries that box contained the jewels—precious beyond words—of the reigning queens of the Chow dynasty. They were wrapped in silver and gold tissue—of which this is a feeble modern substitute."

From a cummerbund under his robe he drew a piece of shining material, the appearance of which was greeted with cries of feminine delight.

"You would not ask me to commit sacrilege?" Quietly he replaced the material in his belt and turned away, and Hugh's eyes glistened at the cleverness with which the man was acting. Whether they believed it or not, there was not a soul in the room by this time who was not consumed with eagerness to put the Chinese cabinet to the test.

"Supposing you took my pearls, Mr. Ram Dar," said the duchess diffidently. "I know that compared to such historic jewels they are poor, but perhaps it would not be sacrilege."

Not a muscle on Lakington's face twitched, though it was the thing he had been playing for. Instead he seemed to be sunk in thought, while the duchess continued pleading, and the rest of the party added their entreaties. Then, as if he had decided suddenly, he swung round.

"I will try," he announced briefly, and the duchess headed the chorus of delight. "Will the Presences stand back, and you, your Grace, take that?" He handed her the piece of material. "No hand but yours must touch the pearls. Wrap them up inside the silver and gold." Aloofly he watched the process. "Now advance alone, and open the box. Place the pearls inside. Now shut and lock it." Obediently the duchess did as she was bid; then she stood waiting for further instructions.

But apparently by this time the Great Brooding Spirit was beginning to take effect. Singing a monotonous, harsh chant, the Indian knelt on the floor, and poured some powder into a little brazier. He was still close to the open window, and finally he sat down with his elbows on his knees, and his head rocking to and fro in his hands.

"Less light—less light!" The words seemed to come from a great distance—ventriloquism in a mild way was one of Lakington's accomplishments; and as the lights went out a greenish, spluttering flame rose from the brazier. A heavy, odorous smoke filled the room, but framed and motionless in the eerie light sat the Indian, staring fixedly in front of him. After a time the chant began again; it grew and swelled in volume till the singer grew frenzied and beat his head with his hands. Then abruptly it stopped.

"Place the box upon the floor," he ordered, "in the light of the Sacred Fire." Hugh saw the duchess kneel down on the opposite side of the brazier, and place the box on the floor, while the faces of the guests—strange and ghostly in the great light—peered like specters out of the heavy smoke. This was undoubtedly a show worth watching.

"Open the box!" Harshly the words rang through the silent room, and with fingers that trembled a little the duchess turned the key and threw back the lid.

"Why, it's empty!" she cried in amazement, and the guests crowded forward to look.

"Put not your hand in!" cried the Indian in sudden warning, "or perchance it will remain empty."

The duchess rapidly withdrew her hand and stared incredulously through the smoke at his impassive face.

"Did I not say that there was power in the box?" he said dreamily. "The power to render invisible; the power to render visible. Thus came protection to the jewels of the Chow queens."

"That's all right, Mr. Ram Dar," said the duchess a little apprehensively. "There may be power in the box, but my pearls don't seem to be."

The Indian laughed.

"None but you has touched the cabinet, your Grace; none but you must touch it till the pearls return. They are there now; but not for mortal eyes to see."

"Where Did the Protector of the Poor Obtain the Sacred Cabinet of the Chow Kings?"

Which, incidentally, was no more than the truth.

"Look, oh! sahibs, look; but do not touch. See that to your vision the box is empty. . . ." He waited motionless, while the guests thronged round, with expressions of amazement; and Hugh, safe from view in the thick, sweet-smelling smoke, came even nearer in his excitement.

"It is enough!" cried the Indian suddenly. "Shut the box, your grace, and lock it as before. Now place it on the table whence it came. Is it there?"

"Yes." The duchess' voice came out of the green fog.

"Go not too near," he continued warningly. "The gods must have space—the gods must have space."

Again the harsh chant began, at times swelling to a shout, at times dying away to a whisper. And it was during one of these latter periods that a low laugh instantly checked, disturbed the room. It was plainly audible and someone irritably said, "Be quiet!" It was not repeated, which afforded Hugh, at any rate, no surprise. For it had been Irma Peterson who had laughed, and it might have been hilarity, or it might have been a signal.

"Bring the box, your grace," he cried harshly; and once more the duchess knelt in the circle of light, with a row of dimly seen faces above her.

"Open; but as you value your pearls—touch them not." Excitedly she threw back the lid, and a chorus of cries greeted the appearance of the gold and silver tissue at the bottom of the box.

"They're here, Mr. Ram Dar."

In the green light the Indian's somber eyes stared round the group of dim faces.

N. J. CITY IS HIT BY FIRE; LOSS TOTAL $60,000

Entire West Section of Long Branch Threatened; Fire Of Incendiary Origin

LONG BEACH, N. J., Aug 29.—Fire of incendiary origin ignited simultaneously in five different places today did $60,000 damage and was prevented from destroying the entire west end section only by the quick work of seven volunteer fire companies.

Five buildings, located in two different blocks took fire at the same time. When the flames were extinguished, oil-soaked rags and waste were found in all of them. All five buildings were gutted by the flames.

Charles O'Keefe and James Warner, volunteer firemen, were seriously injured when the roof of the west end station of the New York and Long Branch Railway Company fell in. They were taken to the Monmouth Memorial hospital where it was said they probably would recover.

Dr. James Cattanach, another volunteer, was painfully injured, when thrown from a fire truck when speeding to the fire. His injuries are not serious. The work of the firemen was made more difficult by the stiff northwest wind blowing at the time. The spread of the flames to adjoining buildings was prevented however.

After all the fire apparatus in Long Branch and West End has been called out, word was flashed to Deal, asking aid. Word came back that all the Deal apparatus had been sent to Asbury Park, on what proved later to be a false alarm.

Detectives working on the case expect to make arrests today.

Shipping Board To Get Ships Returned

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Federal Judge Martin Manton ordered the immediate return of all vessels under charter to the United States Mail Steamship Company to the shipping board. The shipping board has been seeking to regain these vessels. This action was taken at the request of Herbert Noble and Emmet McCormick, receivers for the U. S. Mail Steamship Company.

Sidetrack Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug 29.—The senate Finance Committee voted Saturday to sidetrack the Fordney tariff bill and to take up the revision of the internal revenue laws with the expectation of having the new tax bill ready to report to the senate when congress convenes on September 21. Hearings on the tariff bill probably will be concluded next Thursday.

EASTERN LABOR IN POLITICS NOW

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 29.—Organized labor intends forming a permanent "non-partisan political campaign organization."

This announcement was made following the forenoon session today of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

The organization, according to the authoritative announcement, will function in all local, state and national elections.

State federations and locals will name campaign committees to cooperate with a central committee at Washington. The program for the perfection of the organization, it is announced, will be made public shortly.

The federation by this means hopes to take a prominent part in elections and secure recognition as such a factor.

A new drive on Congress was outlined today. The executive council instructed a committee to investigate all bills that affect labor's interests.

Clevelad Has Big Sum To Pay Out

MARGIE PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCES

"Margie," the McGregor Company's popular comedy scored a big hit with the two big audiences of Coshocton theatregoers at the Sixth Street theatre Saturday afternoon and night. "Margie" officially opened the 1921-22 theatrical season at Sixth Street.

The musical selections in "Margie" were catchy, with a good swing and tinkle and the big hits, "Pucker Up and Whistle," "Kill You With Love," "My Sweet Mamma," and other clever numbers were of the whistling kind.

The next show of the season will be Coburn's Minstrels, which will appear at the Sixth Street theatre on Tuesday night, September 6. Manager Hagans announced Monday that "Kissing Time," the George V. Hobart-Ivan Caryll musical comedy success, will appear at his theatre on September 13th.

The principal roles are in the hands of Eve Lynn, Dan Marble, Mabel Frenyear, Murray Stephens, Mabel Gould, Charles Horne, Jesse Willingham and Augustus Buell.

right of collective bargaining on a labor union basis, the eight hour day and similar fundamental rights. It has also prevented an unwarranted reduction in wages. It has been courageous from the standpoint both of the public, forward-looking and constructive and the transportation industry.

The great need of the country after the armistice, Lauck said, was a series of principles or a code to govern industrial relations and conditions so that the continuity of production might not be broken by strikes, and that maximum production might be attained at the lowest cost to the consumer.

The first industrial conference which was called by President Wilson with this object in view, he continued, turned out to be a tragic failure. The steel strike, which might have been settled, cost the country hundreds of millions of dollars and the coal strike followed with equally disastrous results.

The second industrial conference, called by the president, the so-called Hoover conference, was equally futile, the economist declared. It prepared an extendeed report and recommended the establishment of elaborate machinery for the adjustment of labor disputes but failed in its primary duty by failing to urge certain fundamental principles as mandatory up the adjustment of disputes.

"The transportation act, however," Lauck continued, "not only provides a board for the settlement of railroad labor controversies, but also laid down as the constitution of this board a code of seven principles which should be mandatory upon the Railroad Labor Board in making its decision. The significant and praiseworthy features of the board's work has been that it has gone beyond these seven standards and has laid down sixteen additional principles as mandatory upon its own action and upon collective bargaining between railway employes and management.

"Their decision on the subject of punitive overtime has undoubtedly prevented a national railroad strike. The aggregate of their decisions has been to provide a constructive basis of procedure in railway industrial relations, which will not only safeguard the interests of employes but will also enable the railroads to operate economically and in the public interest, if railway management will co-operate properly with the railway workers."

Bonner's Winning Battle

By FREDERICK CLARKE

(©, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Bonner sat at the long table in the room of the Gray's Mailing company, addressing envelopes. Bonner could write twelve hundred a day, which netted him two dollars, and that meant a fair living at the best.

While he wrote he was watching the girl with the fair hair who sat at another table, was busily sealing the envelopes with sponge and water. He had noticed her during the entire four days that he had worked for that particular company.

The girl was quiet and refined; she worked—how hard she worked! Bonner had walked home with her the evening before. She lived alone in a mean room in a tenement tenement, for which she paid three dollars a week to a hard-faced landlady, and she coughed incessantly. She was working to get the money to go west, where the clean air would cure her. She had seventy dollars saved by two years of toil, and she needed a hundred. Would she gain it before it was too late?

Bonner had forty-nine dollars. His room cost him a dollar and forty cents weekly, and he lived on food snatched at cheap lunch counters. Once he had been a civil engineer; then he gave way to the drink passion, a hereditary disease. He had addressed envelopes for two years; he found the labor one which permitted his thoughts to roam unchallenged and he had become the automaton that all addressers grow to be. He saved his money because he knew that soon the dreadful craving would clutch him by the throat again.

As Bonner went out he saw the girl's eyes fixed pityingly on his own.

Three hours later Bonner stood on the same block, fighting madly against his overwhelming passion. He had never fought so hard, but he knew that he could resist no longer. He pulled out his money and counted it, then turned back toward the saloon. Then he found his way barred and looked up into the face of the fair-haired girl. She had stopped impulsively and now stood before him, her hands outstretched.

"What is the matter?" she asked. "You are ill?"

An agony of remorse swept over him. He turned away into the empty yard of a factory and she followed him.

"Listen!" he said fiercely. "I am not ill—only fighting with my personal devil—the drink devil. You don't know what a devil that is. Take all my money." He thrust the bills into her hand. "Take it and go away and be cured. The money will save your life and I shall always remember that."

"O!" she cried impulsively, "we are both fighting losing battles. You, too! I knew! I knew you were suffering when I saw you in that room."

"Losing" battles. What if he should fight again, fight to win, as he might have fought if Edith had stood by him! A sudden resolution came into his soul and nerved his will to steel. He took her by the hands.

"Would you stand by me to the end, girl, if I fought to win?" he asked, and she nodded bravely.

"Then," he said triumphantly, "let us fight our battles together. Not here, but in the West, where one has a chance to live, or one can die under the broad sky—as men and women should die or live. Will you?"

Suddenly the dirty factory yard had become an antechamber of heaven.

Canada's Timber.

One-third of Canada's standing timber is estimated to be spruce, of which there may be between 100,000,000,000 and 150,000,000,000 board feet suitable for lumber, besides 300,000,000 or 400,000,000 cords of pulp-wood. Possibly one-half of the total is not at present commercially accessible. Consul Felix S. S. Johnson reports that of the five Canadian species, red spruce is confined to the maritime provinces and eastern Quebec; white spruce and black spruce extend from the Atlantic to Alaska and northward to the mouth of the Mackenzie; Sitka spruce grows only in the Pacific coastal region, and Engelman spruce is plentiful in the mountainous interior of southern British Columbia. Sitka spruce, which reaches a diameter of 8 to 12 feet and a hight of 100 to 150 feet, was found during the war to have a special value for aircraft framework. Canada's spruce production in 1919 was $44,000,000 in timber, and $25,000,000 in pulp-wood.

Trailing Criminals by Plane.

The use of bloodhounds to trail criminals has been widely practiced for many years, but the use of the airplane to transport them quickly to the scene of the crime and enable them to pick up a "hot trail" is a new development.

In Colorado Springs a pack of the man trailers has been trained to ride in an airplane, and their first flight other than for practice, was to Buena Vista, Col., 120 miles away, where a store was robbed and a safe blown open by bandits. Two hours after the call was received the hounds were on the scent, and tracked the men to a lonely ravine, where they had parked their car. The officers were thus able to learn the direction taken by the criminals and made a capture that night.

Patent-medicine men filled their almanacs with ancient jokes to show their skill in prolonging life.

ROSCOE COPS THIRD GAME OF GREATER COSHOCTON SERIES

The sun shone on Roscoe Sunday afternoon.

The third game of the five game series for the championship of Greater Coshocton was won handily by the challengers by a 9 to 6 score. The count today stands two to one in favor of Coshocton.

To Jim Crambler, plucky little right hand hurler who held the Coshocton boys to ten hits and six runs in spite of the five errors behind him goes a great share of the credit.

The batting eyes of the visiting team come in for the rest of the glory, for the Roscoe team amasses a total of 15 hits.

Bob Wiggins was off color and lasted only four innings against the terrific onslaughts of the Roscoe clubbers, who scores all nine runs off the veteran slabber. Lew Payne, who relieved Wiggins held the visitors runless over the remainder of the route.

The batting honors of the day were copped by Kenny Carter, Roscoe's third sacker, who hit safely four of the five times he went to the plate. Bob Wiggins was a close second with two long drives for a total of five bases. Henry Clark, Roscoe middle-fielder clouted the pill for two singles and a double.

The fourth game of the series will be played on the Red Sea diamond Thursday evening at five o'clock. Manager Mohler will probably give Bob Wiggins a chance to come back in this game, while Manager Slaughter, of Roscoe will have a new hurler on the team. He expects to cop this game and tie up the series.

Small Girl's Generous Offer.

Little Rose was playing with her doll when the wig fell off. Just then a man came along who had no hair on the top of his head. Rose ran up to him and said: "Say, mister, you can have this wig to cover that empty spot on the top of your head if you want it."

reprint the Gregory story.

Permission was promptly granted to reprint one-third of the article with proper credit. "This is in accordance with our usual custom in such cases," wrote the editors of "The World's Work." Before this letter was received, however, "The World's Work" called "Soviet Russia" on the telephone and explained hurriedly that it was a "mistake" and that this article was an "exception" to their "usual custom" and could not be reprinted. "The Worlds Work" would prefer, said its eritor, that "Soviet Russia" did not even quote from Captain Gregory's story. A second letter from "The World's Work" stated that permission to reprint had been given "under a misapprehension" and "is hereby withdrawn."

The following summary of the Gregory article appears in the September issue of "Soviet Russia":

Capt. T. T. C. Gregory, a former San Francisco attorney and American army officer, represented the United States on the Inter-Allied Food Mission to Central Europe, created by Mr. Hoover in February 1919. In addition, Captain Gregory was the head of the American relief administration in Central Europe and he says, Mr. Hoover's "personal agent." Thus accredited, Captain Gregory set to work with a very clear conception of the job allotted to him. "Way down in my heart," he says, was the knowledge that "we were not only feeding people, but also were fighting Bolshevism." Mr. Hoover, according to Captain Gregory's conception of his chief's purpose, "was feeding and succoring Balkanized Central Europe only as an incident to the fight he was making to threw back the red wave of Bolshevism."

In the summer of 1919, it seems, the "salvation of Central Europe depended on the immediate ousting of Bela Kun from his position as Bolshevist dictator of Hungary." That was Captain Gregory's task. And Mr. Hoover "required no exhaustive explanation of our situation to spur him on to the most strenuous efforts."

Force was the "obvious method." Marshal Foch promised to turn the trick—with an army of 250,000 men. But the supreme council dared not risk it; so Captain Gregory had to do the job alone. To be sure he was "instructed to keep out of Central European politics." Nevertheless "something had to be done."

According to the captain story, the representative of the Hungarian Soviet at Vienna, General Boehm, was the readiest tool at hand. General Boehm, was shown an alluring picture of what it would mean if he should organize a counter-revolution in Hungary. "We urged on him," says Captain Gregory, "the opportunity that was offered him to make a deathless figure on history's pages—the hero who struck the bloody hand of Communism from the throat of an exhausted nation.——We offered him the enticing plum of glory, fame, honor and power and a logical scheme for plucking it."

Boehm asked whether the supreme council would stand behind the attempt. Captain Gregory and his colleagues "undertook to obtain the most favorable possible pronouncement from Paris." It is not to be imagined that Mr. Hoover's man worked entirely single handed. He took into his confidence Sir Thomas Cunningham, the British military commissioner, and Prince Borghesi, the Italian diplomatic representative. The gentlemen approved the captain's plan.

Boehm, of course, was a mere tool. "The real conspiracy we had set afoot," explains the captain, "was one dominated by the labor-democratic interests in Hungary." Agoston, Gerami and Haubricht, Hungarian "labor leaders," were the true friends and allies of the American captain, the English baronet and the Italian prince.

A program of action and policy was drawn up for the approval of the powers in Paris. "There is no doubt that Mr. Hoover was the principal agency responsible for the quick return we received." The supreme council hesitated, but Mr. Hoover insisted that the scheme could do no harm and "might result in the overthrow of the Hungarian Reds." The persuasive argument prevailed, and so, relates the captain, "my work in the hatching of the plot . . . . was done."

Still the captain found himself in a tight place. His zeal—"born of my single purpose to feed and aid those unfortunate milions"—had put him in a hole. The bribe in his bargain with the Hungarian "laborites," Agoston, Gerami and Haubricht, was a promise to deliver the food which had been so zealously withheld from Soviet Hungary. But the captain had no funds with which to buy food. Mr. Hoover had wired him that no more funds were forthcoming. How then could he make good on his bargain. There was food to be bot from private packers in Trieste. But no money with which to buy. This did not deter the captain. He knew where he could get the money.

Several times, it appears the assistant commissar of food of the Hungarian Soviet republic had come secretly to Captain Gregory in Vienna, begging to be allowed to buy food for the starving people of Hungary. "I had refused him absolutely," says Mr. Hoover's man, "for there was a blockade on Red Hungary. I had told him from the first that we would have no dealings of any nature with Bolshevism and that he was wasting his time asking me."

Forty-eight hours before the coupe was to be sprung in Budapest, Captain Gregory sent for this Soviet commissar and told him that he might reconsider his refusal to sell food to the Hungarian people. "He almost cried with joy." But the food must be paid for in cash, stipulated Gregory, a million dollars in cash. The commissar agreed. "There were tears in his eyes," writes the captain, "and I knew I could trust him." Next day the money was brot. The captain took it and placed it in a Vienna vault. Did he then in return deliver food to the Hungarian Soviet republic from which he had accepted this money? He did not! He closed a deal with the packers and told them to hold the food for instructions.

The coupe was sprung in Budapest. The Soviet government went down. Captain Gregory released the food. "Within a few hours," he relates with a relish, "the people were eating the bread and the fats that the Bolshviki all unknowing and entirely never conscious of the irony of the situation, had bot thru me."

The great national dish of Korea is [illegible]. To make it you plunge a large lump of ice into a bowl partly filled with steaming vermicelli of the endless variety. Over this you pour a portion of hot beef stew. The ice congeals the beef fat into little islands of grease, and you never know whether the portion dangling from the end of your chopsticks will be icy cold or burning hot. The vermicelli, which is very tough, is to be lifted to the mouth with the chopsticks. Keeping a firm hold on it with the lips and teeth, you slip the chopsticks down to lift again and take up the slack by gulping.

WONDERFUL GAIN IN WEIGHT MADE

Young Woman only Weighed 76 Pounds — Now Weighs Over 100 And is Gaining Every Day

"Before I began taking Tanlac I only weighed 76 pounds, I now weigh over one hundred and am gaining every day," said Miss LaRue avis, of Chattanooga, Tennessee.

"I bought my first bottle of Tanlac at Gas City, Ind., and it helped me so much that I continued using it. I have always been very delicate and suffered a great deal from stomach trouble and rheumatism. I rarely ever had any appetite and simply could not relish anything. I fell off until I weighed 76 pounds and was so thin I looked perfectly awful. This is the condition I was in when I began taking Tanlac.

"Oh, I feel so different now. Even my complexion is improved. My appetite is good and I can hardly get enough to eat. Tanlac is simply grand and I can truthfully say that it is the only medicine that has ever done me any good."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Buckeye Brevities Gathered By I. N. S.

COLUMBUS, Aug., 29—Regulations issued by State Director of Agriculture Taber and R. M. Black, chief of the bureau of dairy and foods, require that all cream sold in this state must contain not less than 18 per cent butter fat and that all whipping cream must have at least 30 per cent butter fat and that each must be so labeled.

The regulations, further stipulate that the word "cream" or any combination, or association of the word, shall not be used as a name, or part of a name of any imitation of, or substitute for, cream, milk, or skimmed milk mixture of less than 18 per cent butter fat in connection with the sale of such imitation or substitute.

It is decreed that the words "cream half and half," "split cream," "thin cream," etc., and like labels shall not be used but words such as "special milk," "half and half," etc., may be used on caps or labels for coffee and cereal milk, provided the name of the producer, or vendor, the words "standardized, or whole, milk" as the case may be and the butter fat content be plainly printed on the cap, or label.

CADIZ, Aug., 29—The Gallagher orchard in Harrison produced 350 bushels of peaches last year. There were nine peaches in the entire orchard this year.

COLUMBUS, Aug., 29—The first prosecution has just taken place here under the new state law, effective about two weeks ago, prohibiting the use of false, or assumed, names by persons when registering at hotels.

In municipal court, Mrs. George Erickson, accused of falsely registering at a hotel here under the name of Mrs. H. Butler, was fined $25 and costs. The fine, however, was suspended on condition that Mrs. Erickson use her right name hereafter.

SPRINGFIELD, Aug., 29—Members of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards will exhibit their skill in a bowling contest here on the evening of October 12 at the Recreation club hall, North Limestone St. This contest will be one of many interesting events provided for entertaining Ohio realtors attending the 12th annual convention, to be held in Memorial hall here, October 13-15. A loving cup will be awarded the winning team by the Springfield Real Estate Board.

COLUMBUS, Aug., 29—Ultimate adoption of the automatic telephone in Ohio's large cities is predicted if the proposed merging of the Ohio Bell and Ohio State Telephone Companies is approved by the state utilities commission. The transition, however, will be gradual and will not be completed for a long time, according to E. A. Reed, who is to be president of the consolidated company. Both phones are to be used for the time being. A number of changes are planned in the system of numbers now used by the Bell company in order to effect connections which will enable users of either the Bell or the automatic phone to get numbers on the other.

COLUMBUS, Aug., 29—Over 1,500 delegates are expected to attend the fourth annual convention of the Grand Order of Supervisory Officers of the American and Canadian railroads to be held here October 10-12. The convention headquarters will be at the Elks' home, East Broad street. The order has more than 6,000 members.

ELYRIA, Aug., 29—When his trial finally was ready to start, after seven postponements, William Warner, druggist, who had intimated he woud bitterly contest the case, changed his plea to guilty and was fined $500 for selling medicated alcohol for beverage purposes.

DEFIANCE, Aug., 29—Four thousand people constituted a record crowd at the annual picnic of Defiance county farmers at Crystal Fountain park in Sherwood.

COLUMBUS, Aug., 29—Colliding with three vehicles, George Fremas, 24, East Rich street confectioner, was arrested accused of operating his auto while intoxicated. The police claimed Fremas' car demolished a peddler's wagon in Fairwood avenue, near Mound street; wrecked an auto at Main street and Fairwood and smashed the car of W. E. McDonald, 660 Lilly avenue, at Bryden Road and Fairwood. Mrs. McDonald and child were bruised when thrown from the car. Fremas' machine was badly damaged.

BUCYRUS, Aug., 29—To Mrs. Matilda Cole, of Vernon township, belongs the honor of being the first lady ever drawn on a grand jury in Crawford county. Her name was drawn Thursday for the grand jury which convenes on September 15.

COLUMBUS Aug., 29—Figures made public by the state tax commission show that the 1921 tax duplicate for Ohio's 16,000 domestic corporations who have reported to the commission is $564,864 larger than last year's, the new duplicate totaling $4,380,160 as compared with $3,815,296 for last year.

CADIZ Aug., 29—A cemetery in town here has been abandoned and converted into a play ground. Workmen said they found more snakes than bones, killing 12 reptiles.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Aug., 29—Belmont county has three teams at the Ohio State Fair. All are composed of members of boys' and girls' clubs. One is judging dairy cattle, the winner getting a trip to the National Dairy show where the Belmont county team won first place last year. Another demonstrates food canning while the third demonstrates dressmaking. One county clothing club has a member who is only eight years old. She makes everything she wears.
